DEFINITIONS

Below are summary descriptions of prohibited conduct. For policy definitions of each term, please reference the UW-Madison Policy on Sexual Harassment and Sexual Violence.

Sexual Harassment

“Sexual harassment” refers to the result that unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, and other verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature has on the subject’s work or academic environment. When determining whether sexual harassment occurred, a variety of factors may be considered, including differences in power status between the involved parties and the context of the interactions (i.e., social setting or workplace). Sexual harassment can occur in two different forms.

Quid Pro Quo

“This for that” occurs when major academic or employment decisions are based on someone’s submission to or rejection to the unwanted sexual advances or conduct.

Examples include:

- A supervisor requires sexual favors in exchange for a hiring, promotion, raise or grade
- An advisor refuses to write a recommendation letter for a graduate student because they’ve rejected advances
- A manager or professor changes a work or academic assignments because someone has refused requests for dates or a romantic relationship

Hostile Environment

Sexual harassment occurs when the unwanted sexual conduct is sufficiently severe or pervasive to interfere with someone’s workplace or academic environment.

Examples include:

- Someone is subjected to unwanted sexual comments about their appearance from co-workers almost daily, making that person so uncomfortable and distracted they are unable to complete their work on time.
- A professor frequently tells his student about his personal sexual relationships during office hours, and this makes the student so distressed that they no longer attend office hours or the professor’s class.

Sexual Assault

Any sexual contact without consent, including sexual touching, groping, or rape. Remember, a person is unable to consent to sexual activity if they are incapacitated due to alcohol or drugs.

Consent means words or clear actions that openly show a person who is competent to give informed consent freely agrees to the sexual contact.

Stalking

Behavior pattern directed at a specific person that causes serious emotional distress or fear for physical safety. This may include monitoring, pursuing contact through calls or emails, sending unwanted gifts or items and showing up at victims' home, workplace, or class.

Dating & Domestic Violence

Violence or threat of violence committed in a "dating relationship," which is defined as a romantic or intimate social relationship between two adult individuals.

Retaliation

University policy, as well as state and federal law, prohibits retaliation against anyone who has filed a complaint or otherwise participated in the investigation of a complaint of sexual harassment or sexual violence.

ACCOMMODATIONS AND PROTECTIVE MEASURES

Requesting an Accommodation

You may have trouble focusing or concentrating at work or you may no longer feel safe in certain places and you may desire changes in your environment. UW-Madison will make every effort to make accommodations for academic, living, transportation, working situations, or protective measures if requested and reasonably available. Victims do not need to report to law enforcement or participate in a formal university investigation to receive these accommodations.

Protective Measures

The University has a variety of resources to help you maintain your safety. These services are available to you whether or not a formal investigation occurs. In addition to the accommodations listed above, you may want to consider these methods of restraining contact:

No Contact Directives Issued by UW-Madison

One tool the University of Wisconsin-Madison uses to support a safe, respectful, and responsible educational and working environment, either as a proactive measure or in response to and prevention of additional incidents, is a no contact directive.

A no contact directive is a university-issued directive that prohibits the recipient from having contact with the individual or individuals named in the directive. The no contact directive is different than a restraining order/civil injunction issued by a court of law and may be issued independent of campus investigatory/disciplinary processes. A no contact directive is issued when an authorized university employee determines that an individual should be prohibited from having contact with another person or persons. Violation of a no contact directive issued by UW-Madison may result in disciplinary action up to and including dismissal.

Civil Restraining Orders Issued By a Court of Law

A Restraining Order is a court order limiting defined potential conduct of someone who has abused or harassed you, ordering them not to abuse or contact you. A restraining order is issued by a judge and is enforced by police; a restraining order can be issued to people not affiliated with UW-Madison. For instructions on how to file for a court-ordered restraining order, please visit the Dane County website or contact Domestic Abuse Intervention Services (DAIS) (608-251-4445)

UW-Madison and UWPD will enforce active no contact and restraining orders issued by a court of law. If you are an employee and have a court issued restraining order, please notify UWPD.

Information specific to students requesting a No Contact Directive can be found in the Annual Security Report or the Title IX website.*

REPORTING AND RESPONSE OPTIONS

Concerns that are raised to the university might be handled in a variety of ways, including formal investigations and alternative resolutions. When a report is made to the university, it is not confidential.

Reporting to the University

Alternative Resolution

An alternate resolution may include a university official speaking with the respondent (the person accused of the misconduct) about their conduct and reviewing relevant campus policy. The purpose of this meeting would be to stop the problematic conduct from continuing. This type of resolution may be appropriate for people experiencing harassment, stalking or other ongoing unwanted contact, but may not be appropriate for other types of misconduct. No factual findings or conclusions are made about the alleged conduct in this scenario.

Formal Investigation

A formal investigation concludes with factual findings and a decision about whether the respondent violated campus policy, which could result in sanctions. For more information on situations where the respondent is a UW employee or guest, read Section VIII of the UW-Madison Policy on Sexual Harassment and Sexual Violence. You have the right to a support person or an advisor (who may be an attorney at your own expense) during all stages of this process.

Investigations regarding alleged violations of this policy will be conducted using the applicable university investigatory or disciplinary procedures. The disciplinary procedures that will be used will be based on the relationship of the respondent with the university.

Reporting to Law Enforcement

Criminal conduct can also be reported to law enforcement. Any criminal conduct can be reported to police. You should report to the law enforcement agency that has jurisdiction over where the crime occurred.

UWPD is a full-service, 24-hour law enforcement agency. UWPD officers have the authority to make an arrest, regardless of whether the perpetrator is associated with UW-Madison or not. Contact: UWPD (608-264-2677) or Title IX Program (608-890-3788)

Other local law enforcement agencies include the Madison Police Department and the Dane County Sheriff's Office.

Other Useful Information about Reporting

Campus vs. Criminal

Campus Process

- Penalties are given for violation of university policy
- Responsibility based on “preponderance of the evidence” standards
- Limited ability to impose penalties or restrictions for those not affiliated with UW

Criminal Process

- Has power to arrest and charge with criminal offenses
- “Beyond a reasonable doubt” standard for conviction
- Only able to take action on conduct that violates criminal law

Preserving the Evidence

If you do choose to report to either the university or law enforcement, or think you may consider doing so in the future, you should consider preserving evidence that might be relevant to an investigation.

Evidence may include:

- Text messages, emails, and other written communications. Messages between the parties or between witnesses may be helpful, including messages in which you may have told a friend or support person what happened.
- If you are experiencing ongoing or repeated abuse or harassment, track dates and times and specific conduct in a calendar or journal. You can also obtain a “stalking booklet” from the police or use a personal calendar to help you keep track. This practice can also help with memory recollection.
- In some situations, collecting forensic and medical evidence close to an assault can prove critical, specifically in relation to law enforcement prosecutions. This is best collected and documented by a forensic nurse examiner.
- Timing may be important for other types of evidence. Reporting as soon as possible increase the likelihood that evidence will remain available.

Even if you do not have all or any of types of evidence described above, it does not mean that you cannot report the misconduct or that the respondent will not be able to be found responsible.
